Natural light: Workers install the large glass panels on top of a 98-foot-high octagonal stair tower in the middle of John Simon Hall, the new business school under construction. The large panels are approximately 14 feet high. The tower, designed by Kallmann, McKinnell, and Wood of Boston, Mass., was inspired by the traditional stone towers atop Graham Chapel and Brookings and Ridgley halls, but it is constructed out of steel and glass rather than masonry. The top of the tower, which is 30 feet high, brings natural light into the center of the building.

Harvard professor will head WU's pediatrics department

Harvey R. Colten, M.D., has been appointed head of the Department of Pediatrics at WU School of Medicine, effective March 1986.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Chancellor William H. Danforth. Colten will replace Philip R. Dodge, M.D., who is stepping down after 19 years as department head to pursue his research interests in pediatric neurology.

Colten also has received the Alumni Endowed Professorship in Pediatrics, the second professorship endowed by alumni and former house staff members in a program designed to attract and retain outstanding faculty members. The first Alumni Endowed Professorship was given in 1982 to Philip Needleman, Ph.D., head of the Department of Pharmacology.

Colten currently serves as professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School, as well as chief of the Division of Cell Biology and director of the Cystic Fibrosis Program at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

His research has focused on understanding the biochemistry, genetics and cell biology of inflammation in such disorders as cystic fibrosis, arthritis, asthma, juvenile diabetes, autoimmune diseases and inflammatory disorders of the intestinal tract. Using that knowledge, he attempts to find basic causes and define more specific forms of treatment for these disorders.

Kentucky governor's lecture caps Woman's Club 75th anniversary

Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins will speak at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 20, in Graham Chapel. Collins' lecture is co-sponsored by the Assembly Series and the WU Woman's Club.

Collins, who was elected in 1983, is the first woman governor of that state and one of only a handful of female state executives in the nation. Considered a moderate Democrat, she was one of three women interviewed by Walter Mondale for the vice-presidential candidacy. She also served as chairman of the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Following Collins' lecture, the Woman's Club will hold their fall luncheon at the University's Wohl Center. The luncheon will honor Marion Gilson, a member of the club for 60 years, and Edith Boling and Ann Murphy, who have been in the club for 50 years. Gilson and Boling are past presidents of the club.

"I've enjoyed being a member because of the friendships I've made over the years," says Gilson. "It's been a great comfort and pleasure to be a part of the Woman's Club all these years." She has written a history of the organization that covers the years 1950-1985.

The luncheon and lecture close the 75th anniversary celebration of the WU Woman's Club. Collins' talk is the club's second annual Assembly Series lecture.

The Woman's Club is a social organization that sponsors cultural and educational functions. Its members include women faculty and staff and wives of faculty and staff.

The Woman's Club of WU held its first meeting on Dec. 5, 1910, in the British Pavilion, a 1904 World's Fair building which then housed the School of Fine Arts. The membership during the club's early period ranged between 40 and 80 women. The club now boasts approximately 300 members and has 19 committees and 15 interest sections including women on campus, bridge, needlecraft and literature.

The Nov. 20 luncheon is open to members and their guests. The cost is $10. For more information, call Charlotte Eldredge, the club president, at 725-8254.

Alzheimer research center funded here

WU has been named one of five new Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers (ADRCs) that have received funding for the next five years from the National Institute on Aging (NIA).

The local ADRC will receive funding of more than $3,750,000 for a five-year research program. The NIA will provide the five new centers with $3.4 million in grants for the first year, and a total of $25 million for the next five years, to study the disease.

Alzheimer's disease, a neurological disorder with no known cause or cure, affects some 1.5-2.5 million Americans. It is the most common cause of severe intellectual impairment and institutionalization among the elderly.

Other than WU, new centers have been established at Duke University, the University of Kentucky, the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Washington. The NIA has now funded 10 ADRCs.

The NIA program is designed to encourage research on the basic science, clinical and behavioral aspects of Alzheimer's disease. The centers also will train scientists and health care professionals, and provide information on research advances to the public.

The St. Louis ADRC is directed by Leonard Berg, M.D., professor of clinical neurology and program director of the Memory and Aging Project at the School of Medicine. The Memory and Aging Project began in 1979 as a long-term research study of intellectual function in people aged 65 and older. It provides information on the normal aging process as well as on the effects of Alzheimer's disease on the brain.

Goals of the local ADRC are to compare healthy aging with that of dementia of the Alzheimer's type by examining behavioral and biomedical aspects; to investigate the impact of Alzheimer's on the family and the community; to search for neurobiological factors that could be associated with the disease; and to explore changes in the aging brain that may contribute to Alzheimer's disease.

The center will take an interdisciplinary approach to research on Alzheimer's disease and related disorders. It will support the work of established investigators conducting a wide range of studies: a number of projects examining cholinergic neurons and biochemical changes in the brain, clinical studies involving neuroimaging, epidemiologic studies to identify predictors of the disease, and studies on community attitudes about the disease.

The Fires of London, a chamber music/theatre group will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 19, at Edison Theatre. Under the direction of composer Peter Maxwell Davies, the group of six musicians play, sing and act his dramatic musical scores. The group will present "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame" and "Eight Songs for a Mad King." Tickets are $10 to the general public; $8 to WU faculty and staff and senior citizens; and $5 to students. For tickets, call Edison's box office at 889-6543.

Scholarships send students to Taiwan for firsthand look at Chinese culture

Receiving scholarship aid to help with college expenses is happy news for any determined student. But imagine securing a scholarship to study and conduct research in Taiwan, visit museums, speak the native language daily, develop valuable job contacts with WU alumni and learn about the Chinese people.

These items are on the agenda this fall as two WU students learn what it's like to be a foreigner in Taiwan, examining the Chinese language and culture.

The two students who have accepted scholarships to study in Taiwan for the 1985-86 academic year are Paula Justine Fodor, a 1985 graduate and currently a master's degree candidate in Asian studies, specializing in Chinese art history; and Vivienne Ruth Thompson, a second-year graduate student in Asian studies who has bachelor's degrees in philosophy and religion and Oriental languages.

"There are numerous advantages for students who receive scholarships to study in Taiwan," says Robert E. Hegel, Ph.D., associate professor of Chinese language and literature and chairman of the Department of Chinese and Japanese.

"Students can learn firsthand about Chinese politics, culture and economics," Hegel notes. "In addition, there are fine libraries and museums where scholarship recipients can perform research. They can meet with alumni and make useful job contacts, too." In some cases, there is free round-trip transportation for scholarship winners, regardless of their financial status.

Fodor is the recipient of the WU Alumni Association in Taiwan Scholarship. Since 1977, the association has awarded one scholarship annually to WU students studying Chinese language for a year's study at a public academic institution in Taiwan. The association is composed of more than 100 Chinese alumni in law, business, medicine and engineering.

Fodor, a native of Decatur, Ga., will study at the Mandarin Training Center of National Taiwan Normal University. She also will study art treasures at the National Palace Museum near Taipei, Taiwan.

Thompson, who hails from Portland, Ore., is the winner of the Republic of China Ministry of Education Scholarship. The scholarship furnishes students with free tuition at a Taiwan public university and a monthly living allowance equal to $125, for up to one year.

The Ministry of Education has presented scholarships to WU students studying Chinese language since 1983. Richard H. Yang, Ph.D., professor of Chinese language, was instrumental in securing the scholarships for the University.

The application deadline for the 1986-87 Ministry of Education and Taiwan alumni association scholarships is Feb. 15, 1986. For more information, call the Department of Chinese and Japanese at 889-5156.

Alumni dance recital

The dance division of the Performing Arts Area will present an alumni dance recital at 8 p.m. Nov. 22-24. "Homecoming Dance" features WU alumni Ruth Fuglistaller, Mickey McLaughlin and David Dorfman in a joint recital in the dance studio at the University's Mallinckrodt Center.

Fuglistaller studied dance in Rotterdam, Netherlands, prior to studying at WU. She has performed with dance companies in Amsterdam and Rotterdam. She was featured in a solo program, "Engel," in the Shaffy Theater in Amsterdam. In February, she performed with The Brooklyn Academy of Music at Carnegie Hall in "The Games" by Meredith Monk and Ping Chong.

McLaughlin, originally from St. Louis, works with several New York choreographers and directs her own company. After graduating from WU in 1974 with a bachelor's degree in dance, she co-directed the McLaughlin/Beswick Dance Theatre with Bob Beswick. In 1981, she left the company to form Mickey McLaughlin and Dancers. This spring, she will be guest artist at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo.

Dorfman received a bachelor's degree in business administration from WU and a master's degree in dance from Connecticut College. He has performed internationally with Kei Takei's Moving Earth and with Susan Marshall, Catlin Cobb and Ton Simmons. This spring, he will join McLaughlin for a series of duet performances in the Midwest.

Tickets for the performance are $5 to the general public and $4 to students. For tickets, call the Edison Theatre box office at 889-6543.

Edison site of satellite symposium

Edison Theatre will be one site among others throughout the United States and Canada for a satellite symposium on artificial intelligence (AI), being held Wed., Nov. 13. Titled "Knowledge-based Systems and Their Applications," the day-long symposium will feature presentations by four leading AI authorities, followed by a discussion of current applications of AI technologies.

The satellite symposium is sponsored by Texas Instruments Inc., and officials at the company believe that, with more than 20,000 participants in some 400 locations, it may be the largest technical teleconference ever held.

Hosted jointly by the Department of Computer Science and the Center for the Study of Data Processing, the symposium is free and open to the public and will run from 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 889-5330.

Fine arts school holds career day Nov. 23

The School of Fine Arts will sponsor a Careers in Art/Portfolio Day on Saturday, Nov. 23, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on campus. Art students, parents, art teachers and counselors all are invited to attend.

Representatives of 25 art schools from across the country will be available to review the students' art, offer guidance in portfolio preparation and art careers, and provide information about their institutions' programs of study and financial aid.

For more information, call the WU Office of Admissions at 889-6000.

Soccer team: Regional champions

The WU soccer team, the Great Lakes regional champions, will host the University of California-San Diego at 1 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 17, at Francis Field in an NCAA Division III quarterfinal playoff game. The Bears, now 19-2-0, eliminated Wheaton College 2-1 in overtime last weekend during the Great Lakes regional. The Wheaton team, ranked number two this year, won the 1984 national championship.

Ranked 13th in the nation and third in the region, WU opened Great Lakes region play on Friday, Nov. 8, with a 1-0 victory over Ohio Wesleyan University. Freshman Tom Hundelt scored the Bears only goal midway through the second half.

On Saturday, the Bears played the Wheaton College Crusaders. WU scored first when Hundelt tallied his second goal of the tourney and fifth of the season. The Crusaders tied the contest at 1-1 right before halftime. With 1:32 remaining in the second and final overtime, freshman Terry Pexton scored the Bears' biggest goal of the season, giving them their fourth regional championship, the 2-1 overtime victory and the right to move on to the tourney quarterfinals.

If victorious in the next two playoff contests, the Bears will play Dec. 7 or 8 for the national championship.

NOTABLES

Gray L. Dorsey, J.D. and J.S.D., Charles Nagel Professor of Jurisprudence and International Law at WU, has received the 1985 Spurgeon Smithson Award from the Missouri Bar Foundation. The award carries a $2,000 stipend. The Spurgeon Smithson Awards were established in 1976 by bequest of the late Spurgeon Smithson, a Kansas City, Mo., lawyer. The awards are made annually by the foundation to a Missouri judge, teacher of law and lawyer deemed "to have rendered outstanding service toward the increase and diffusion of justice among men."

Reka Kozak, associate librarian at the medical school, presented two papers at the Second Conference of Librarians of Hungarian Origin at Budapest. Her first presentation, on the William Jay Smith collection at Olin Library, focused on Hungarica research in an American academic library. Her second paper, on BACS, the integrated library system at the Medical School Library, described what highly advanced library technology can contribute to effective library operations.

Samuel Logan, M.D., Ph.D., assistant professor of plastic and reconstructive surgery, has received a Biomedical Research Support Grant and a Plastic Surgery Educational Foundation grant totaling more than $10,000. The grants will fund his research on wrist biomechanics and kinetics, and biomechanics and morphology of human wrist ligaments, respectively.

Robert H. Salisbury, Ph.D., Sidney W. Souers Professor of American Government, is serving as a visiting scholar at the American Bar Foundation during the fall semester. He is continuing his research, in collaboration with others at the foundation, on the representation of interests in Washington. In October, Salisbury lectured at Hamline University, the College of St. Thomas and the University of Minnesota, and delivered the principal address to the annual meeting of the Minnesota Political Science Association.

Peter G. Tuteur, M.D., associate professor of medicine, was elected to a one-year term as a member of the board of trustees of the American Society of Internal Medicine (ASIM) at the society's 29th annual meeting, held Oct. 10-13 in Washington, D.C. Founded in 1956, ASIM is a federation of state component societies with more than 20,000 members nationwide. Tuteur serves on ASIM's Health Care Financing Committee.

Rural Missouri students receive scholarships

Eight students from rural Missouri communities who are attending WU have been named the first Loretta A. Backer Missouri Scholars.

In establishing the Loretta A. Backer Missouri Scholarship Fund of more than $200,000, Backer stipulated that recipients be from rural areas and small towns in Missouri.

Born in St. Louis, Backer moved as a child to a small farm near St. James, Mo., where she attended elementary and high schools. She graduated from WU in 1926 with a bachelor of arts degree and presently lives in Silver Spring, Md.

"In a small way, I want to start helping gifted high school graduates from rural areas and small towns in Missouri begin their education at a university of which they can be proud," she said. "I know from experience that there is a real difference in the income level of the type of families I want to reach when compared with that of families in large towns and cities."

The 1985-86 scholars and their hometowns are: Keith Anderson, School of Fine Arts, Diamond; William Bertram, School of Business, Farmington; Paul Demichow, School of Engineering, West Plains; Harold Ernst, School of Business, DeSoto; Elaine Flansburg, College of Arts and Sciences, Bowling Green; Leslie Limbaugh, College of Arts and Sciences, Farmington; Teresa Morehead, College of Arts and Sciences, Neosho; and Connie Petlitzer, College of Arts and Sciences, Nixa.

Born on George Washington's birthday, Backer decided very early that she would attend WU. After earning her degree here and teaching high school for a brief period, she accepted employment with the Ralston Purina Co. In February 1943, she was accepted as an officer candidate and commissioned an ensign in the U.S. Coast Guard Women's Reserve. After the end of World War II, she was employed by the Veterans Administration.

With a relatively modest inheritance and her own savings, she invested in the stock market and experienced considerable success. Primarily from these investments, Backer made several gifts to benefit young people. She established a scholarship fund in memory of her parents at the St. James (Missouri) High School and provided a substantial gift to the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in St. Louis.

Over the past 20 years, she established seven charitable trusts with WU, retaining the right to income and has now donated her interest in these trusts and has consolidated them to activate the new scholarship fund. She intends to add to the scholarship fund through future annual gifts and the residual of her estate.

According to Benjamin S. Sandler, director of financial aid, "The Backer fund is one of a number of important scholarship contributions which help make Washington University's financial aid program among the strongest in the country. Fifty-five percent of our students receive financial aid based on need and scholastic achievement. Scholarship awards are generous, ranging from partial to full scholarships."

For more information about financial aid opportunities and application procedures at the University, write to the Office of Admissions, Campus Box 1089, Washington University, St. Louis, MO 63130. The deadline for applications for the 1986-87 academic year is mid-February 1986.

Colten joined the faculty at Harvard in 1970 as an assistant professor of pediatrics, and became a full professor in 1979. He was chief of the allergy division at Children's Hospital Medical Center from 1973-76. His career also has included academic appointments at George Washington University Medical School and the National Cancer Institute.

He received his medical degree from Western Reserve University in 1963. He completed an internship and residency in pediatrics at University Hospitals in Cleveland, and a residency in pediatrics at Children's Hospital of D.C. in Washington, D.C. Colten also served a two-year research fellowship with the National Institute of Child and Human Development.

He is a member of many professional societies, including the American Society for Clinical Investigation, American Association of Physicians, American Association of Immunologists, American Pediatric Society, American Academy for the Advancement of Science and American Thoracic Society. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Allergy, a diplomate of the American Board of Pediatrics and the American Board of Allergy and Clinical Immunology, and a former member of the board of directors of the American Board of Allergy and Immunology.

Colten serves on many national and regional committees related to asthma and allergy, and on various editorial boards. He is author or co-author of nearly 130 publications and more than 40 reviews or chapters on his scientific investigations.

"Chinese Ceramics" by Herb Weitman is included in the "Photographs in the WU Collection" exhibit through Dec. 29 in the Gallery of Art's print gallery in Steinberg Hall. Weitman, director of photographic services in the public relations department and adjunct professor of photography in the School of Fine Arts, shot the photo in the Huishan Clay Figure Workshop in Wuxi, China, during a 1979 trip. The painted figures, representing a 400-year tradition, stand about three inches tall, he said. The exhibit also includes both black and white and color photographs by such photographers as Harry Callahan, Eliot Porter and Paul Caponigro. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 5 p.m. weekends.
